LIZZIE BORDEN IN COURT.

Investigation of the Murder Mystery Fall River, Mass.

There have been some sensational developments in the investigation of the Borden murder mystery at Fall River, Mass., but nothing as yet to fix the crime very clearly upon Lizzie Borden. This remarkable young woman continues to bear herself in the most composed man

The testimony of Bridget Sullivan, the servant girl, was to the effect that she was asleep when the murder was committed, and was aroused by Lizzie Borden's voice. Under the lead of District Attorney Knowlton, she gave a minute description of the happenings on the morning of the murder, the object being to show that nobody but Lizzie Borden could possibly have been the criminal.

Dr. Dolan testified as to his examination of the wounds of the murdered Bordens. He created a sensation when he admitted that the heads had been removed from the murdered bodies by order of the District Attorney, and that the skulls were in his possession.

The testimony of John V. Moore, the uncle of the Borden girls, tended to throw doubt on the stories of quarrels and ill feeling in the Borden family.

The cross-examination failed to shake Bridget Sullivan's testimony. It is conceded that the District Attorney did not draw out all of the servant's evidence, and the defence also avoided doing so. Little doubt is entertained that Lizzie Borden will be held for trial.

Slight discrepancies were shown by witnesses to have occurred in Lizzie Borden's statements after the fire, but the most important evidence related to the fact that there were no signs of blood on her clothing or hands, and no evidence of excitement or exertion such as would naturally have followed the murder. It is said that the defence will introduce new and important evidence in confirmation of Dr. Handy's story as to a strange man being seen on the Borden premises an hour before the tragedy.

Dr. Wood testified on Tuesday that by analysis he found no traces of poison in the stomachs of Mr. or Mrs. Borden, the victims. He also testified that no traces of blood can be found on the clothing of Lizzie Borden nor on the hatchets found on the premises. It is believed that this evidence establishes the innocence of Lizzie Borden, the daughter, accused of murdering her parents.

Miners Entombed.

A terrible mining accident occured at the Parkslip coal pit, near Bridgend, a mining town in Glamorganshire, Wales. The day shift of miners had not long been in the mine before a heavy explosion was heard. The ground trembled with its force. The day shift comprises 150 men, and their relatives and friends rushed to the mouth of the pit to learn the extent of the disaster. The explosion had caused the earth and rock to fall and the mouth of the pit was closed. Not a single man of the 150 made his escape. Forty-one of the entombed miners were rescued after two days of labor, two of whom afterward died. It is feared that all the other miners are dead.

Prof. Totten's Latest Warning. Professor Totten is out with another warning. He now announces that he has just unsealed the whole book of Daniel, and that by means of the key it coverand sweeps into its comprehensive scope the straight sequence of time from Adam to the year 6001 A. M. We are now in the year 5891 A. M. (our 1892 A. D.) The Professor says that he is firmly convinced hat during the jubilee year, 1895 6, A. D., reckoning from the September equinox to equinox, the clouds now gathering upon all sides will culminate. The professor, however refuses to appoint a day or an hour.

A Gladstonian Triumph.

John Morley, Mr. Gladstone's Chief Secretary for Ireland, has been re-elected to Parliament from Newcastle by 1,739 majority. Mr. Morley was the only member of Gladstone's cabinet whom the Tories opposed. As his (Mr. Morley's) majority in the recent general election was less than 200, the Tories hoped to defeat him and administer a blow to the home rule programme. His success is regarded as a great home rule triumph, and will strengthen Mr. Gladstone's hands. He received the united Irish vote, but many of the labor party voted against him.

Russia and England. It is stated from St. Petersburg that M. De Staal, the Russian Ambassador to of views on the Pamirs question with Lord Roseberry, the British . Foreign Secretary, and that a satisfactory settlement is likely to result.

The stage of the big Metropolitan Opera House in New York was descroyed by fire, and the magnificent audiorium much damaged. The loss was $300,000. It will be repaired. The puilding cost $2,000,000.

Two mines at Wardner, Ida., worked by union men, have been closed by Gen Curtis, who declines to allow union labor to be employed in any part of the coun try. Citizens are beginning to chafe under the restraints of martial law. Information having been received by the State and Treasury Departments that cholera has broken out at Hamburg and Havre, strict orders were issued to the Customs and Health officials at the ports of entry to carefully inspect all emmigrants and to disinfect their baggage. The Executive Committee of the International Conference of State Boards of Health met this week at Indianapolis to take precautionary measures. A suggestion was received that the President be petitioned to forbid immigration during the prevalence of the cholera epi-

New York officials are taking every precaution to prevent the introduction of cholera. All incoming vessels are closely examined, and those which hail from infected ports will be quarantined. A number of immigrants were detained by the health authorities, but will probably be released shortly.
